I'm hoping to work for a forward thinking company that provides modern technological services in the IT or AV industry.

I love people and bring strong people skills to a field that is unfortunately, often times, lacking it. I'm a good multitasker and very reasonable. My problem solving abilities and strong work ethic make me a good leader in group situations. I am an MCP and fluent with both Windows and Mac OS operating systems including common productivity suites including Office, Adobe Creative Suite, iLife and iWork.

I started my IT career in 1996. I supported over 200 Windows and Macintosh computers for the high school I graduated from. After proving myself during my junior year as the technical liaison's assistant, they hired me on full time.

After that I worked for a local manufacturing company, and although I dealt with fewer computers, the challenges were much greater. The company was always integrating the newest technology into their work flow. I supported a Windows Active Directory server, 12 workstations and, at that time, cutting edge mobile solutions in the mid 2000's. I was also the company's graphic designer, creating all company brochures, sales materials and catalogs.

My next opportunity (and current place of employment) was to an AV company that specialized in high end home theaters and home automation. I was well utilized as a home automation programmer, graphics designer for touch panels and user interfaces and photographer for our portfolio. My main job however, was as the system designer and installer for all IT integration and communication.

Over the past 6 years I have also run a small independent consulting company providing computer and AV solutions to residential consumers and SOHO businesses. The people I have supported over the past few years have become not only faithful clients and evangelists, but friends.

I would love to discuss my application further with you. I can be easily contacted by email or phone.

Thank you so much for your time and consideration. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,
Kieran Morgan
